Westbury Leigh Community Hall

Westbury Leigh Community Hall offers an unusual attraction for weddings.

The Hall is actually inside Holy Saviour Church: the nave was converted to a Hall, while the chancel remains a church, used for regular Sunday services and special occasions such as baptisms and weddings. The church was built in the 1870s, but "after the style of the ancient village churches in the county of Wiltshire" so that to a casual glance it looks 13th century. The fine tower was added in 1889, and a stylish clock was installed as recently as 2007.

To book Holy Saviour Church for your wedding, contact the Westbury Parish Office on office@wiltministry.org.uk.

On the day the happy couple can enjoy a traditional wedding in the church, then step straight into the reception in the adjoining Hall, which can seat up to a hundred guests. There is a fully equipped kitchen, with a serving hatch through to the Hall. There is also a separate room upstairs, which can be used as a quiet area for guests.

Hall has been in constant use for a wide range of activities including bingo, quizzes, parties, bridge, dances and yoga - as well as regular weddings. The dual use of the building has been a great success, and it is a real focus for the Westbury Leigh community as well as an attractive facility for people from further afield.

For more information or to book the Hall, visit our website at www.westbury-leigh-community-hall.org.uk.
